

Alice's Adventures in Wonderland

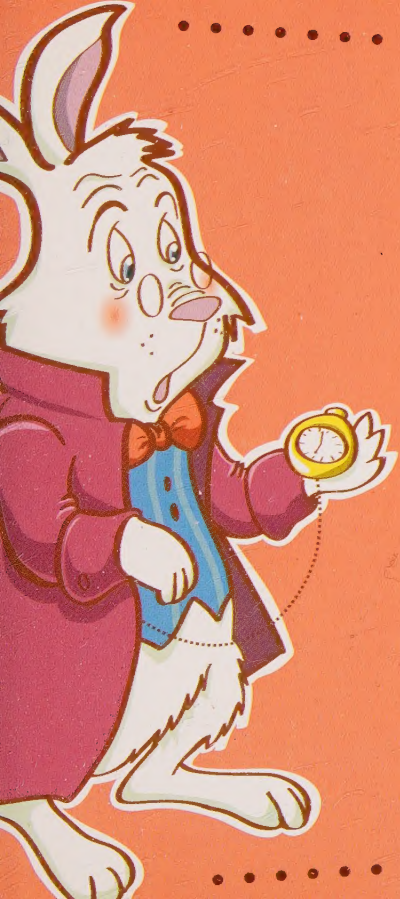

A Most Unusual Tea Party

The page has a solid orange background. A decorative border of small dark brown dots runs along the top, left, and bottom edges. On the right side, there are two stylized floral or leaf-like shapes: a light pink one at the top and a purple one at the bottom, both with white outlines.

Alice is a girl who had many adventures.

They started when Alice was sitting by a river with her sister, and she noticed a rabbit run by.

This was not just a normal, everyday rabbit. This was a white rabbit dressed in fine clothes and carrying a pocket watch.

Alice watched as the rabbit hurried into a rabbit hole and disappeared from sight.
She quickly followed the rabbit to see where it had gone.

That is when she fell...

and fell...

and fell...

for what seemed like a very long time indeed.

When Alice finally reached the bottom of the rabbit hole, she did not know where she was.

As it turned out, she was in Wonderland!

In Wonderland, Alice encountered some of the most amazing, confusing,
stupendous, bizarre, fantastical,
wonderful things.

One of them was a most peculiar tea party.

When Alice saw the tea party,
she thought it was the most unusual thing she had ever seen.

Sitting at a HUGE table sipping tea
and talking nonsense were the March Hare and the Mad Hatter... two of the most curious characters in Wonderland. Between them was the Dormouse...who was sleeping.

Alice was invited to join them, which she did. Then the Mad Hatter and the March Hare bombarded her with riddles and gibberish until Alice grew most frustrated.

Answering one of their many questions,
Alice began in confusion,
“I don’t think...”

But before she could answer, the Mad Hatter said,
“Then you
shouldn’t talk.”

This bit of rudeness was more than Alice could bear, so she got up in great disgust and walked off.

Nobody seemed to notice.

“That Hatter is Mad!”
thought Alice.

“Oh, well, where to next?”
